

The slide is titled "Core Notions" in a hexagonal box at the top left. It contains two columns of text in rectangular boxes:

- Theories of Leadership
  - Trait Theories
  - Style Theories
  - Contingency Theory
- Theories of Teams
  - Team roles
  - Team cohesion (sport)
  - Group action

- Leaders may assert themselves to pull a situation together
- Groups may throw up a leader to help them get through their work
- In the same situation different people may lead different aspects of the work

Leadership Example

- “It is said that there was once a young platoon officer who was believed by his commanding officer to be inclined to run away in battles. This belief was shared by the men in the platoon, not without reason. But the men liked this young officer and wished him no harm. They therefore backed him up strongly on the battlefield so that he should feel less inclined to run away. The commanding officer was uneasy about this platoon officer and as soon as possible replaced him with another young officer about whose braveness there was no possible question. When the platoon went into action the platoon commander was as brave as expected. But now the men ran away.”

General Sir John Hackett, The Profession of Arms (Sidgewick & Jackson, 1983) p 215

Management Roles

Administration (Fayol)

- Forecasting, Planning
- Organizing, Coordination
- Commanding, Controlling

Formal Authority and Status

↓

Interpersonal Roles
• Figurehead
• Leader
• Liaison

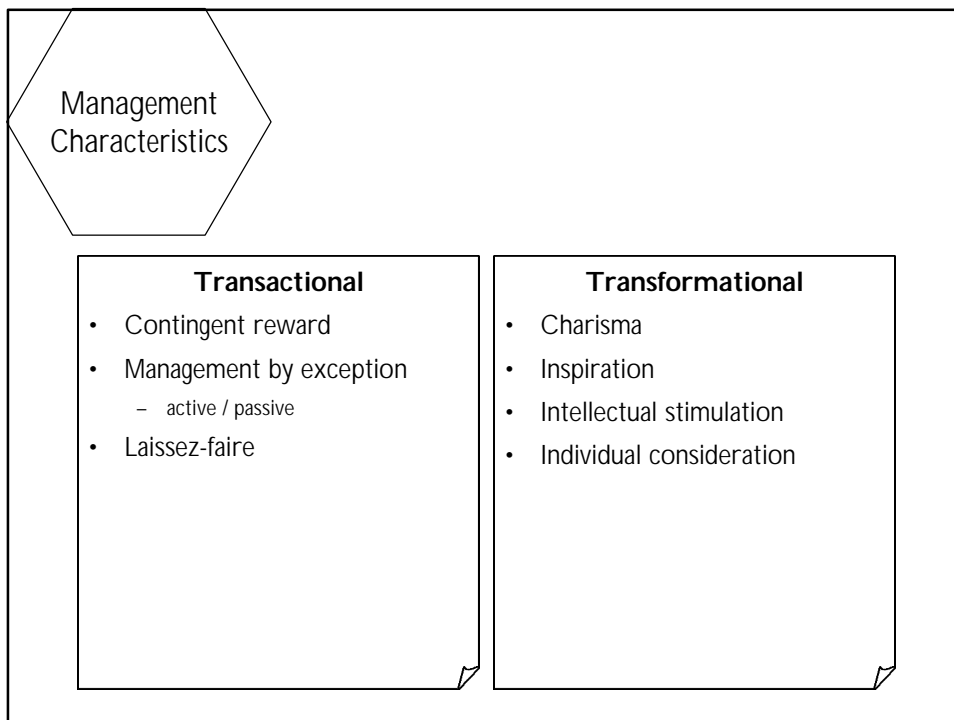

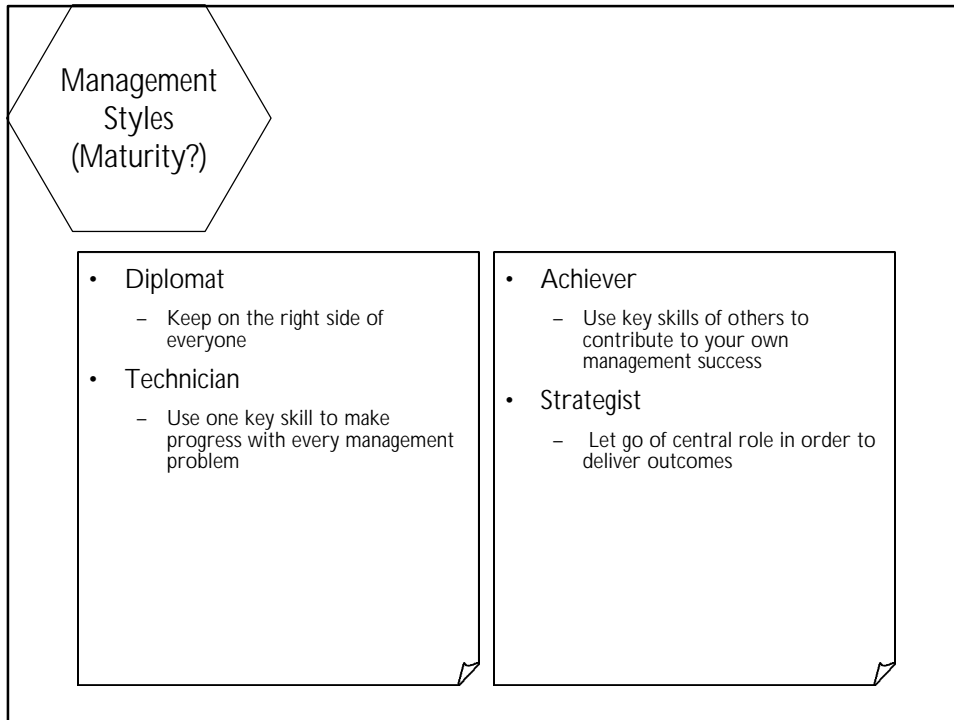

↓

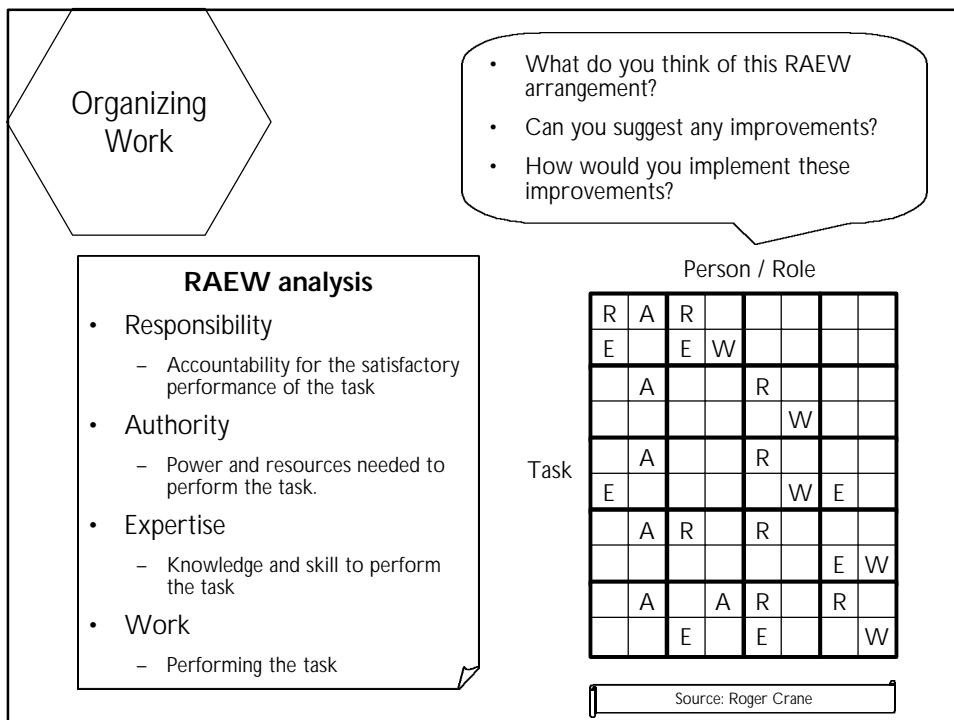

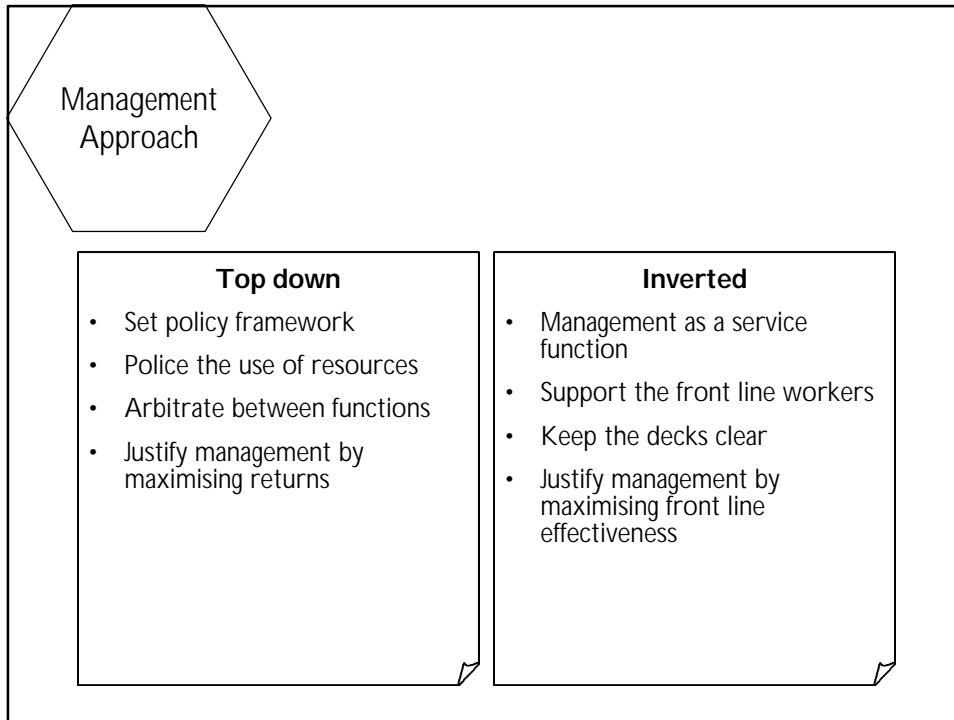

Informational Roles
• Monitor
• Disseminator
• Spokesperson

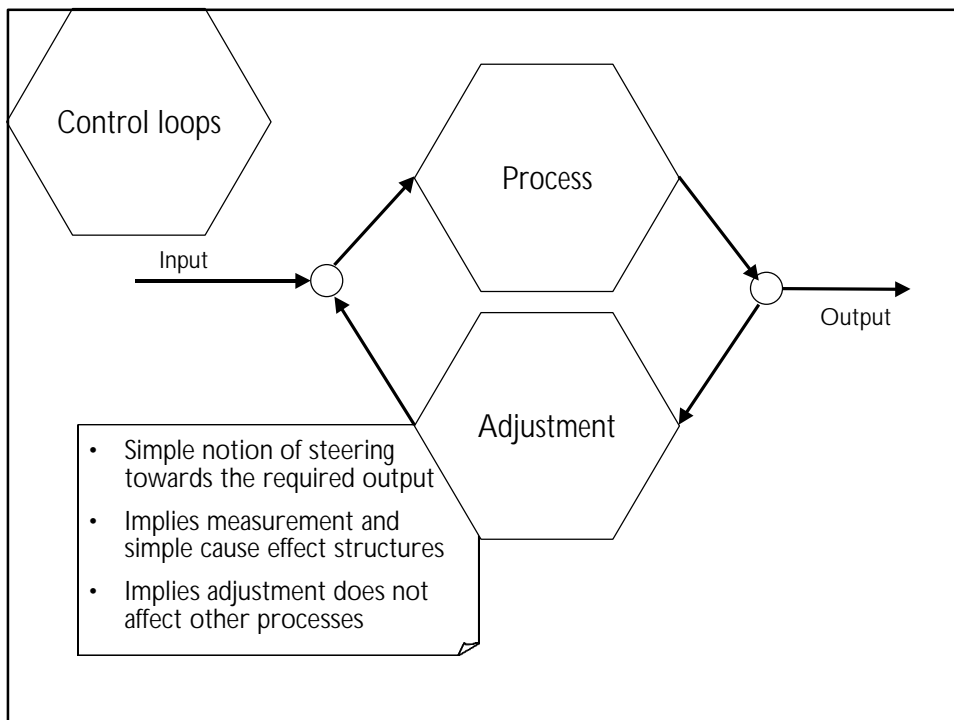

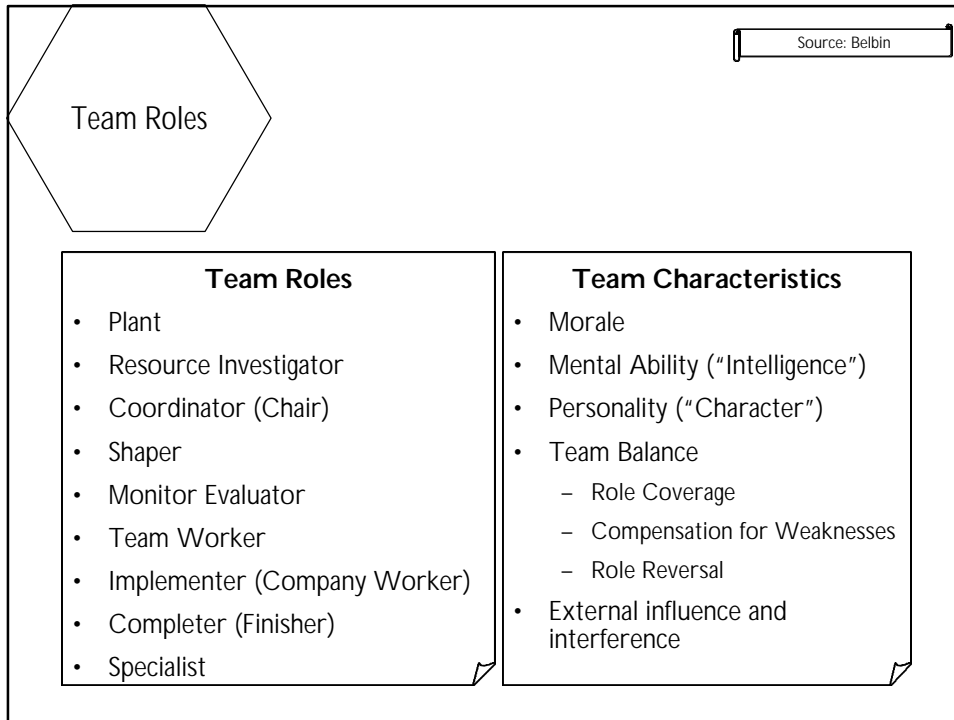

↓

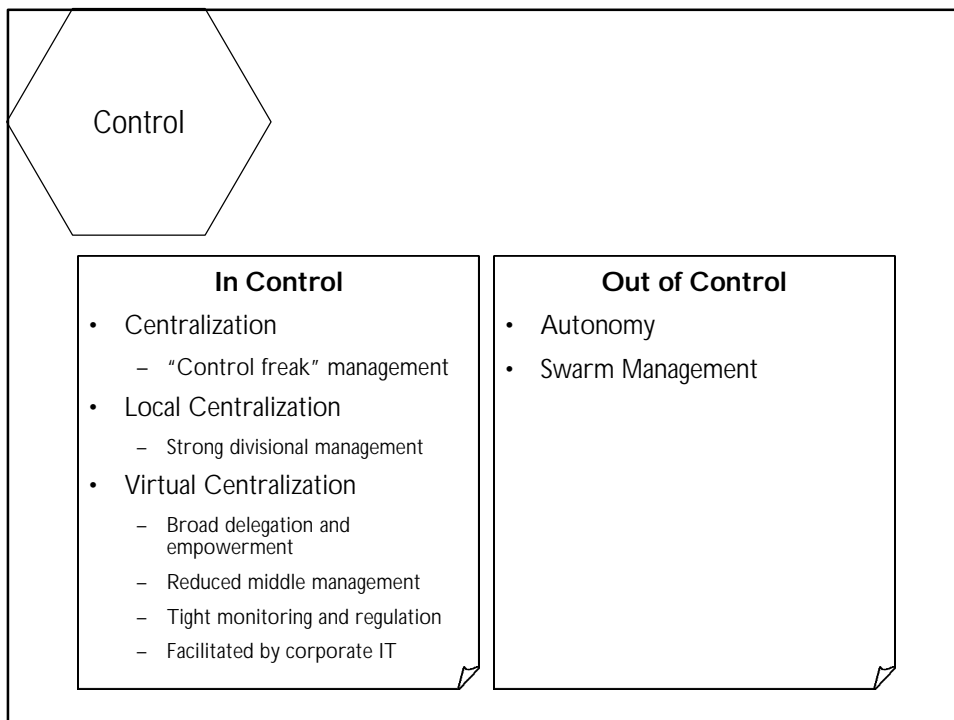

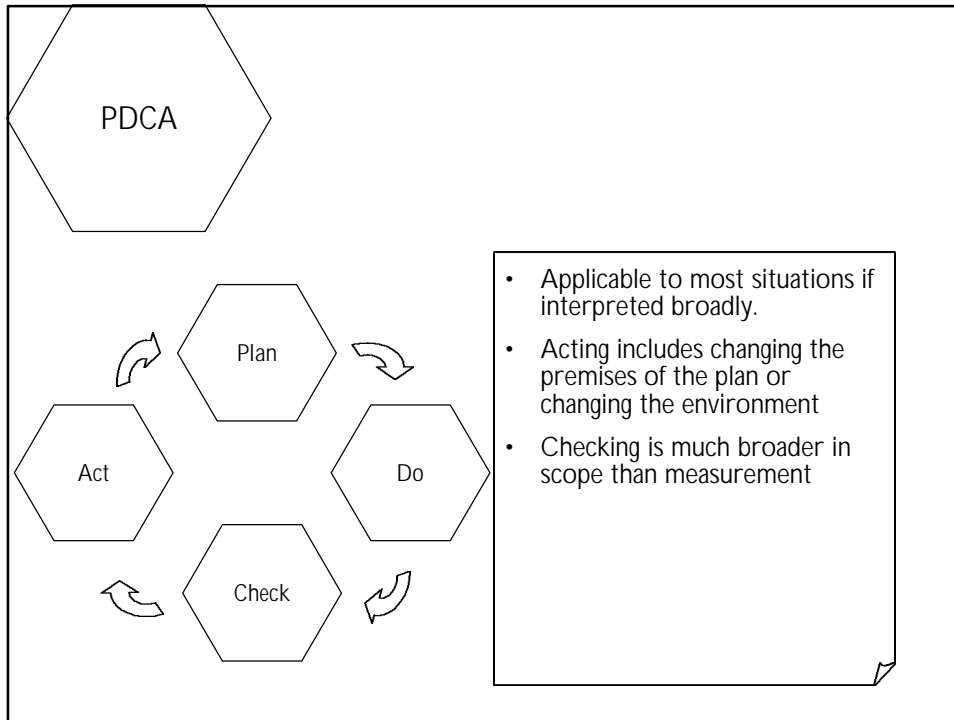

Decisional Roles
• Entrepreneur
• Disturbance Handler
• Resource Allocator
• Negotiator

Source: Mintzberg

Discussion Questions

- Is there a difference between management and leadership?
- When people are acknowledged as good leaders, is their leadership transferable to a new situation?
- What happens to leadership in a merger of organisations? Why?
- When leadership is weak, what options are there for the followers in a business organisation?
- Business leaders have been accused of narcissism. What would convince you that a business leader was not simply acting for his own glory?

Reading

Required	Suggested
<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Hatch Chapter 11</li><li>• Handy Chapters 4, 5</li></ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Larry Hirschhorn, Reworking Authority: Leading and Following in the Post-Modern Organization (MIT Press)</li><li>• Garry Wills, Certain Trumpets: The Nature of Leadership (Simon &amp; Schuster)</li></ul>