

The journey back to England.

Edith enters the dining room and sits down ready for breakfast.

The waiter approaches.

“Good morning ma’am. We have obtained some greengage jam for you to have with your hot gluten-free toast today. What would you like to start?”

Caroline speaks. “Just think, we are here in the City of Gutenberg and when we travel home we will go through Kent, where William Caxton was born.”

They all get up and walk towards the dining room door and notice the waiter.

“Thank you for your prévenance about the food.” says Edith.

The waiter smiles.

The others each smile and say “Thank you.” as they pass the waiter.

Draft 2

Draft 2

Draft 2